

Athens, March 20, 2024

PRESS RELEASE

IAPR: myAADEapp, the new application for direct and easy access to digital services from mobile phones myAADEapp, the new innovative application of the Independent Authority for Public Revenue for mobile devices, was presented today by the Governor of IAPR, Giorgos Pitsilis. Greetings were addressed by the Minister of National Economy and Finance, Kostis Hatzidakis, the Minister of Digital Governance, Dimitris Papastergiou, and the Deputy Minister of National Economy and Finance, Haris Theocharis.

myAADEapp offers the digital services of IAPR to citizens and businesses at any time, wherever they are, through their mobile phone, also functioning as a tax agenda, which informs them of their tax obligations, while at the same time allowing them to download and save useful documents.

In particular, the new application offers a comprehensive set of functions, such as:

- Access to your tax account in real time for information on current tax debts and refund amounts
- Instant secure debt payments, directly from the application, via IRIS or by card
- Management of contact details and IBAN statement for tax refunds
- Monitoring and management of Requests and Appointments
- Access to “My Messages” to receive and manage personalized messages from IAPR
- Specialized real-time alerts for citizens, professionals and tax professionals, as well as personalized tax updates
- myWallet, to add and store essential documents such as Registration Details, Tax Awareness, Vehicle Registration Fees and certificates for easy access
- Instant access to IAPR’s appodixi application for easy scanning and checking of receipts

- Quick Login feature using PIN or biometrics, choice of language (Greek/English) and application color theme
- Locating IAPR services on a map with Geolocation capability and displaying contact details
- Tap-To-Call facility at the IAPR Taxpayer Service Center

Watch HERE the informative video of IAPR.

As Mr. Hatzidakis stated, “IAPR comes even closer to the citizens by utilizing modern technologies. The new mobile application myAADEapp functions as a tax calendar and also as a ‘tax alarm clock’ for citizens and businesses in order to meet their obligations to the Tax Office on time and thus not lose their arrangements. This application is a daily ally for millions of taxpayers for a series of tax transactions, to better inform them about payment deadlines, tax refunds, etc. Together with IAPR, we continue to reduce obstacles and intensify the digitalization of citizens and businesses’ transactions. The initiatives that we already legislated at the end of 2023 also move in this direction and contribute to our tax system’s digital transformation, such as the universal application of myData in businesses, the expansion of electronic invoices, the establishment of the digital consignment note and the electronic customer list as well as the emblematic project of the interconnection of POS with cash registers which is now in its final stage of implementation.”

Mr. Papastergiou stated, “The state’s digital transformation was not accidental; it is the result of a collective effort that continues to be implemented, consistently following the vision of Prime Minister Kyriakos Mitsotakis for a new, brighter and more interactive Greece. At the Ministry of Digital Governance, we work systematically to make everyday life friendlier, with less bureaucracy, for citizens, businesses, and the Public Administration itself. Both the IAPR’s app and a series of other major projects, such as the Personal Number or the Abolition of the Issuance of Certificates which we institute in collaboration with the Ministry of the Interior, are important reform milestones. Our rigorous goal is to earn every day the most valuable resource: the trust of citizens and businesses in the state and its institutions.”

Mr. Theocharis pointed out, “The launch of the myAADEapp application today is a landmark for the operation of the Greek State in general. And for that, perhaps a little more than everyone else, we at the Ministry of National Economy and Finance are especially happy and also proud. Because with myAADEapp, the terms of financial transactions with the State change; the entire relationship between taxpaying citizens and the State and the financial authorities is fundamentally changing. Without exaggerating, myAADEapp is what the Anglo-Saxons usually call a ‘game changer.’ The launch of myAADEapp is additional tangible proof of the mentality that governs the government of Kyriakos Mitsotakis and the New Democracy party: All-round progress, substantial provision of services to citizens, technological and digital acceleration in order to cover the lost ground from the international environment, a delay due to objective difficulties, sometimes due to hesitations or even negligence of our predecessors.”

Mr. Pitsilis emphasized, “myAADEapp reflects our commitment to modernization and citizen-centric service. Our new mobile app provides instant access to our tax services, offering a faster, friendlier and more secure experience for all citizens. It is the first step for the next-generation IAPR, making it easier for citizens to be consistent with their obligations, from whichever corner of the globe.”

